Hi Jeremy,

As per Jarvis, 'Primer station supply line will be copper coming down the wall near the corner adjacent to the door entering the janitor room. The plastic primer lines will adapted to copper into a copper manifold fed from the primer station.' We will proceed and I will submit cost for this now, thanks.

No issue with the proposed priming station. Any response on the exposed primer lines in the Janitor closet and if they will be hard pipe?

Morning,

I understand what you want to do! The request from the engineer is again the following – She is looking for the model she needs a shop drawing!

For the priming station near the post office, what model is the plumbing contractor proposing for the electronic trap primer?

Thanks,

Hello Jeremy

Final connection/ priming stations is part of the interior fit up scope of work. Landlord should have located all the primer lines in one spot, in the Janitor Closet.

Exposed primer lines in the janitor closet, are those proposed to be hard pipe? I wonder if over time they may be damaged with use of the room.

For the priming station near the post office, what model is the plumbing contractor proposing for the electronic trap primer?
